

A large, flowing orange textile sculpture, possibly a sari or a piece of fabric, is draped and twisted into a dynamic, organic shape. It occupies the central and right portions of the frame, set against a smooth grey gradient background. The fabric's texture and folds are highlighted by the lighting.

TexIndia is a premier event that is eagerly awaited by textile enthusiasts and professionals worldwide.

The show brings together the manufacturers and suppliers of fabrics & accessories from different parts of the world to showcase their products and exchange ideas. This helps in promoting business opportunities and fostering collaborations between industry players.

Also contract manufacturing companies and job workers will be exhibiting their services for the knitting and garmenting community, fulfilling a long lasting need to integrate this vital segment of the value chain. The exhibition is focused on highlighting the knitted, woven, printed fabrics, accessories and other innovative textile applications that are emerging in the market.
